

Judy English:

All About Tomatoes

Judy spent 30 years in financial management, first in Chicago banks and then as a financial manager for the University of California at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. Prior to attending MacMurray College in Illinois, she helped her father on their central Illinois soy bean farm and has had her hands in the dirt ever since. She completed the WSU Master Gardener program in 2005 and has concentrated her efforts on public education programs and plant clinics. Her driving passion has been to produce heritage tomatoes in her hillside garden, regardless of the fickle weather.
